Within the scope of its internal procedures the Company identifies managers, notifies in writing the said managers of their legal obligations and obtains from each manager a list of persons closely associated with them. The Company notifies managers of the need to notify those persons closely associated with them in writing of their legal obligations and of the need for record keeping of the said notification.

Inside information

Pursuant to MAR, the Company defines inside information as:

- information of a precise nature related to past circumstances or events, as well as circumstances and events whose occurrence may reasonably be expected and which are specific enough to enable a conclusion to be drawn as to the possible effect on the market, and
- which would be likely to have a significant effect on the prices of financial instruments (i.e. price-sensitive information) – in other words, information which a reasonable investor would be likely to use as part of the basis of their investment decisions.

Both of the above indicators should be used jointly.

Following is a sample list of information which the Company considers as potentially inside information:

- information on the proceedings of a General Meeting.

The above list is merely a sample list of information which the Company considers as potentially inside information.

The occurrence of a particular event from this list does not necessarily mean that it will be qualified as inside information. At the same time, the non-occurrence of a given event from this list does not mean that it is not significant. The significance of each event should be analysed individually by the Company.

The final decision as to whether particular information is considered to be inside information is made on behalf of the Company by two members of the Management Board, after receiving the recommendation of the Disclosure Committee, which is referred to in this Policy.

At the same time, the Company's Management Board is obligated to develop a catalogue of potentially inside information and to approve it as a separate document.

All inside information will be reported by the Company as soon as possible pursuant to laws in force.

The Company also retains the right to delay, on its own responsibility and in accordance with MAR, the disclosure of a regulatory filing containing inside information, if:

- the immediate disclosure of the inside information is likely to prejudice the legitimate interests of the Company;
- any delay is not likely to mislead capital market participants, and
- the Company is able to ensure the confidentiality of the information.

All of the above indicators for any delay in disclosing inside information should be considered jointly.

Disclosure process and process participants

The Policy provides a framework for the process of disclosing information related to the activities of the Company and of the KGHM Group. The principles are described in detail in the internal documents of the Company and of companies of the KGHM Group.

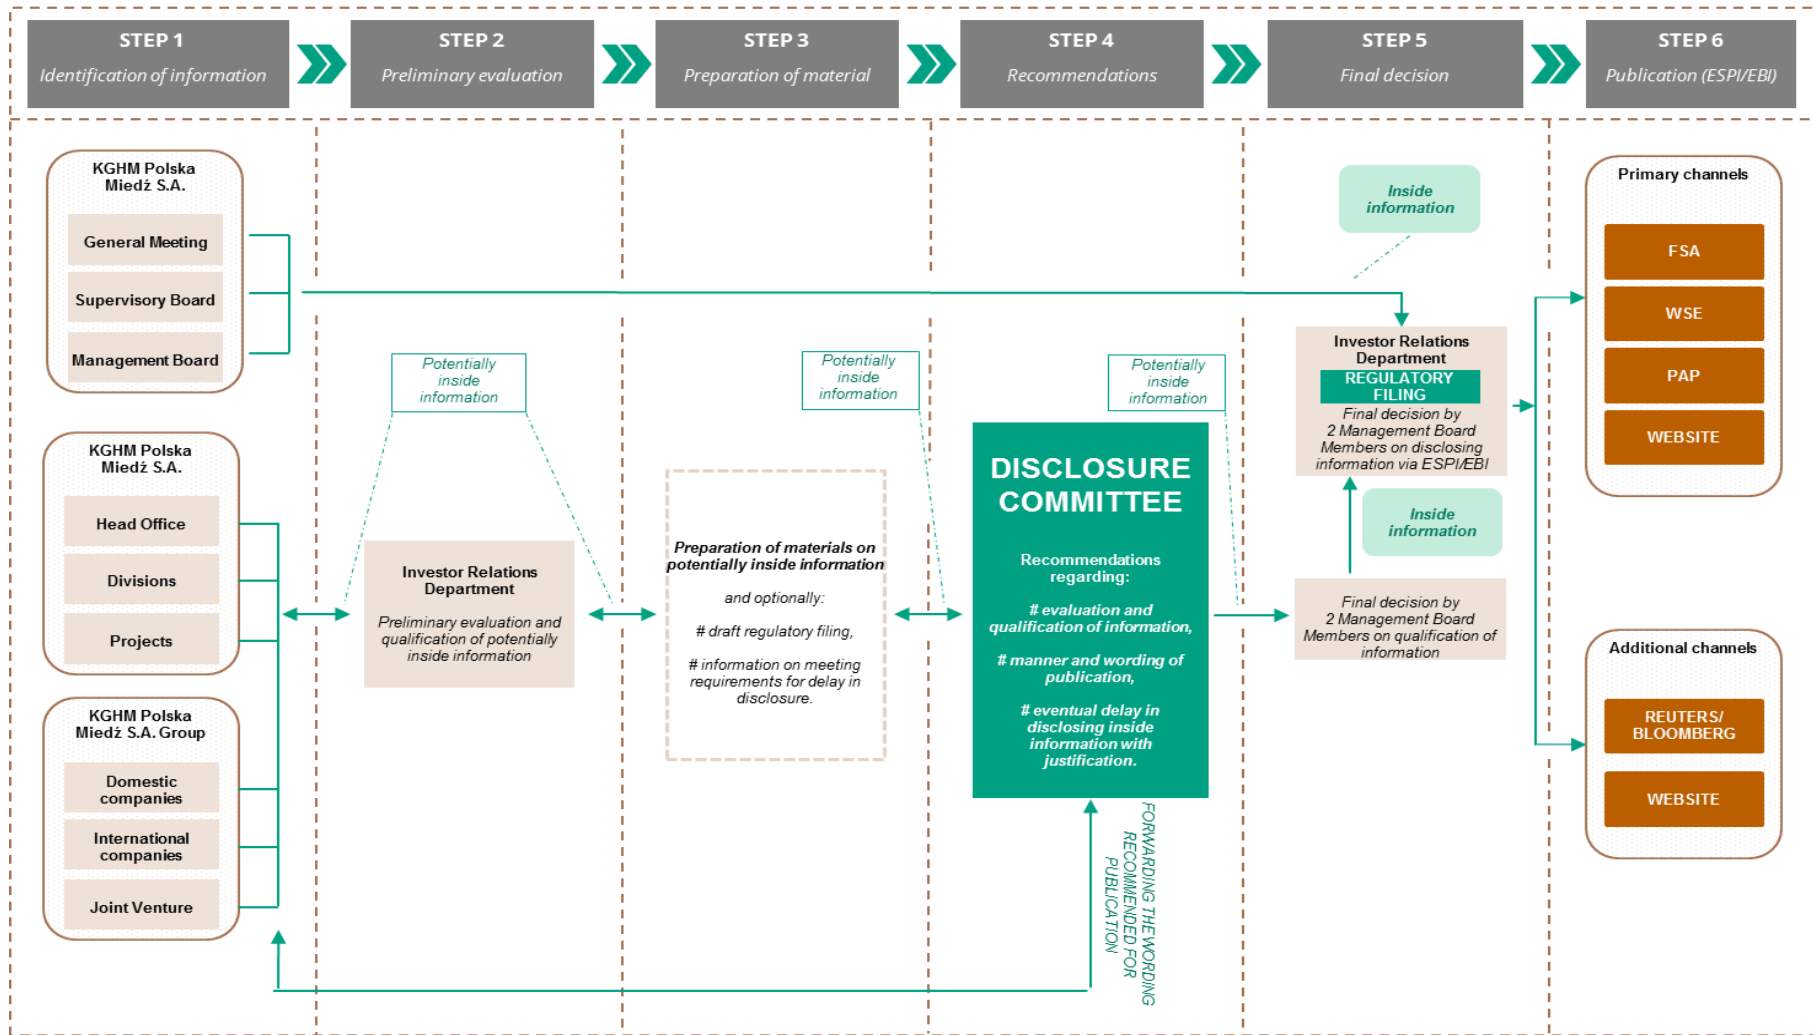

The Policy is coordinated by the Company's Management Board. The Company's Management Board, which carries out an informational policy, is supported in these activities by:

- the Disclosure Committee ("Committee") – which is responsible for ensuring compliance with informational obligations, and in particular:
 - ensuring that adequate processes and procedures are implemented in order to identify potentially inside information;
 - evaluating information and recommending the manner and wording of its disclosure; and
 - supervising the Company's compliance with disclosure laws and internal regulations in force.
- KGHM Investor Relations Department – to which potentially inside information is forwarded for initial evaluation, and is subsequently sent to the Committee to make a recommendation as to the final manner and wording of its disclosure.

The forwarding of information between the companies of the KGHM Group and the Company is executed pursuant to the principles set forth in the Company's detailed internal regulations.

In a case where the Company's General Meeting, Supervisory Board or Management Board makes a decision which results in the generation of inside information, these Company bodies forward the said information to the Investor Relations Department, bypassing the Disclosure Committee, for the purpose of preparing a regulatory filing. The final decision as to the disclosure of inside information is made by two Members of the Company's Management Board.
